Would We Do this All Again

On the following pages, may you find yourself, your friends . . . your memories. As the Chinese proverb so truly expresses "A picture paints ten-thousand words," we stop our world at the corner of State and Union, turning looking into seeing . . . with and without the lens.

From the Desk of the Unonian

On the following pages is the reflection of the personality of Mount Union's 1986-87 school year, unique in its own. Enjoy this collection of memories of your collegiate years at Mount Union as you consider our theme "Would we do this all again?" Laugh or cry, but don't ever forget some of the best years of your life. For this annual may reach its true value a few years down the road, as you wipe the dust off the binding, taking a couple of moments to melt into the world that was home for four or five years . . . wondering, "Would we do this all again?"

An Altered State

In recollection of 1987, what surfaces in many upperclassmen's minds was the tremendous effect November 30, 1985 had on shaping the upcoming school year. The championship football game in blustery Augustana, Raiders vs. Vikings, may not have become the sole contributor to the increased enrollment in 1987, but it can't be denied that this event was a stepping stone for Mount's popularity and growth as enrollment at other private schools across the nation declined.

Sometimes we felt the stress of 1,100 students squeezed on a one-bloc-plus campus we call home. Finding a parking space was either blind fate or illegally filled . . . especially the ever popular handicapped zone in front of HPCC. Slater's turned into noontime madness as students rushed for prime "scoping" positions at vacant tables. The lines were especially long at the registrar's office because some freshmen were closed-out of three of their five classes.

More freshmen meant more minors, which in turn, stirred more legal precautions for one's "method" of partying. Despite government threats to increase the drinking age, partying never minutely neared extinction. As the saying goes: if there's a will, there's a way . . . and the Bierhaus always seemed to be the way

Don't forget the residential changes. Small houses were now occupied by girls. East became a female dorm while King converted to a male dorm. In April 1986 it was the King girls vs. non-King girls battling for dorm room rights; in September 1986 it was the King guys vs. maintenance battling to camouflage their floral decor. Imagine a guy's room with blue walls and a teddy-bear border.

Increased enrollment also brought variety to campus in the way of clothing and hair styles.The salvation army look was in, the psychedelic tie-dye shirts returned, painted jeans were hip, and Reeboks were everywhere. A guy wearing an earring was no longer "suspicious" looking; it became a sign of virile status. As for the hair coiffure, one may let the bangs hang over one eye, or simply braid a tail. But, hairstyles of 1986-87 sports season cannot go unmentioned. Weekly, football players took razors to their heads in team spirit, carving zebra stripes, checkerboards, or their playing numbers into their scalps. On the opposite extreme the soccer players modeled the long-lock European look.

In perspective of Mount's population increase, growth in number spells progress as more ideas are sparked and more initiatives are taken. Hopefully, the voices of concerned students expressed in the Dynamo and The Other will stir constructive criticism towards further changes. We extended dorm hours, we may get a new track, and opportunities could open for new dorms, additional academic electives, and more!

Would We Do This All Again?

As the new kid on the block it is appropriate for me to listen more and speak less but permit me to share a few thoughts/ observations with you on this topic, a topic which focuses on the graduating seniors.

My hope for you is that with each passing year you will be able to say with ever increasing clarity and conviction "Yes, I am very pleased that I decided to attend and graduate from Mount Union College!" On Commencement day all the enthusiasm and excitement make it easy to be happy and excited about having reached the milestone of graduation. But on the following Monday and Tuesday . . . when that hoped for job opportunity has not yet materialized you may wonder, at least momentarily, whether your high school friends who did not go on to college and discouraged you from doing so were right. They now have new cars, new this, new that and appear to be successful at least in a material sense. But what will they do when the limited skills they have are no longer needed or wanted? Can they adapt to a rapidly changing world?

You, I hope, have taken advantage of the opportunities provided you at Mount Union College and have learned how to learn — have learned how to adapt to a rapidly changing world. In a vocational sense this should serve you well. Moreover, and at least as important, I hope you have also utilized your opportunities at Mount Union College to learn how to live — how to enjoy the richness of our and other cultures, how to find and use opportunities to serve with others in volunteer organizations, how to savor and be sustained by meaningful family relationships. All of this lies before you. Sieze the opportunities to serve as much as you seek the opportunities to be served. If you do, I assure you that you will increase the chances for satisfaction with your life.

Mount Union College is here to serve our society by preparing young men and women for what happens immediately after commencement and what happens for the rest of their lives. My hope for each of you is that you have taken full advantage of those opportunities. If you have, there will be no question in your mind that it was all worth it and that you would most definitely do it all again.

British and American Education

Imagine the following "week in the life of a British student": only four to five hours a week in class, in seminars, tutorials or lectures; two of those hours are optional lectures (no attendance policy); one hour a week is spent in a tutorial with a professor and one other student; two hours in a small seminar of six to ten students. This student studies only one subject for the three years they are in college and is usually examined at the end of the first year and then in "Finals" at the end of the whole three years. Courses run all year (three "terms" or semesters) and you may only take three courses a year. The courses themselves are highly specialized, for example, "Dickens and His Age" or "Romanticism and the Visual Arts."

Now, imagine your own week and your own attempts to juggle Biology, Art, English and Calculus! The contrast stems from a different concept of education, from different aims and opportunities. All British students have to get certain very high grades in order to get a place at university and then receive a grant covering all expenses for the three years (if one's parents are wealthy they will be asked to make a contribution but a large sum is still given by the government).

Only 1-2% go on to study for an M.A. or Ph.D. — and this, too, would be paid for by the government.

The British system is clearly selective and specialized and attempts to narrow your knowledge into a highly concentrated area. The system also hopes to foster intellectual curiosity and independence.

Now, once more, consider your own education. You will have noticed that I've tried to explain the British system without evaluating it and without really comparing it to the American. I'd leave you to judge but will point out that my degrees are all from England but I'm very happy to be teaching over here.

Looks like I made it

Before asking yourself "Would you do this all again?" doesn't it make you wonder how you survived Mount in the first place? How did you burrow out of the emotional ditches you dug for yourself? How did you keep peace with your roommates when your nerves had split? How did you manage to swim in the sea of romance and not drown? How did you pay tuition???

Lost in all the pains and pressures of college life and personal growth, did you ever stop and consider, who and what supported you through your years at "Dear Ole M. U. C.?" While you sat in the snackbar preying like a parasite on an Itza pizza, Mom and Dad were home worrying whether you were eating right and sleeping enough because you were homesick, they were kidsick, or you were up at at all hours studying. The first day of class the professors gave you their home phone numbers to diminish the distance and provide a comfortable learning setting. The sports trainers subdued your physical suffering and coaches triggered positive competitive attitudes when the going was tough. Your stereo, perhaps the best therapeutic remedy, offered temporary escape from tormenting tensions. When all energy had been drained from your veins, your pillow was always there, not to mention the aspirin within hand's reach that prevented "Harry" hangover from creeping into your body. During the first snowfall, a glance out your window offered exhilarating energy as you pre-meditated the fate of your first snowball victim or predicted the day of Snow Carnival. Often a peck from your sweetheart, a smile from your scope, or a midnight chat with your best buddy was all it took to conquer the "big, bad blues."

So take a moment to say thanks to these people who have supported you. Buy them a beer. Drop in their office and say "Hi." Carve them a niche in your V. I. P. address book and drop them a line during the holidays . . . any day is a holiday. Stop and smell the roses! Cause when the going got tough and the schedule got tight you maintained!

Experience . . .
Beyond the Classroom

Having done the Wilderness trip for te[illegible] the past eleven years, there have been many times when I've thought very seriously about the question: "Why am I doing this?" The question seems to loom especially large during some of the more trying moments of a trip — perhaps we've endured a lot of bad weather, or are having more than our usual share of difficulties, or the group isn't functioning very well together or maybe I'm just feeling tired from all the responsibility that I feel. It seems that I feel these things at least a few times on each trip. And so each year, after the trip is over, I find myself considering the same question: Do I really want to do it again

The answer is not always easy to come by. There are inevitably a lot of hassles involved in the planning and implementation phases of the trip. It also takes a lot of time and energy away from other pursuits that are also important to me — family, friends, other job-related responsibilities, etc. And so I weigh these costs against the payoffs that the trip offers.

For one thing, I find the opportunity to live for a short period of time in the wilderness a personally enlivening experience. Not only does it force me to get back to basics in my style of living and realize the simplicity of life, but it confronts us with such beauty and evidence of our interconnectedness with all forms of life that it leaves me with a renewed sense of who I am and where I fit in. This is a hard thing to explain in words — it is something I feel. But I really enjoy this aspect of the trip and I like to see students come to a similar appreciation for the potential to be found in nature.

A second thing that I greatly appreciate is that

Mr. Ragosin drying his pants, the hazards of rustic living.

Quote of the Day: 8/12/86
Dr. Kramer: "Ya know, I've had more SAE's on this trip than from any other fraternity. I don't know why that is."
Chris Underation: "That's because SAE's can't find jobs in the summer."
Mike Maloney: "I'm glad you said it because I wasn't going to."

strongly tied to this experience is the opportunity for growth and personal learning on the part of the students who participate. This is exciting to watch and facilitate. I have been involved in no other single experience that seems to have the potential for personal growth than the wilderness trip has. It pushes people beyond their self-imposed limits. The changes in such important personal characteristics as self-confidence of belief in oneself, ability to work together effectively as a member of a team and leadership skills are quite significant. I've seen some dramatic changes in such characteristics over the years and this, probably more than any one single factor, influences my decision to continue this program.

The third major influence on my decision is the opportunity this experience gives me to meet students on a more personal level — the chance to really get to know them in a way that classroom experiences by themselves seldom offer. Being able to have such relationships was a primary motivator of mine for going into the teaching and counseling professions and for taking a position at a small college. This factor helps make the whole educational process more enriching for me and certainly more enjoyable.

These, then, are the factors that most influence my decision. At present, the payoffs seem to outweigh the costs and so I continue to be involved in the experience. And as long as there are students who feel the same way, the trip will continue to be offered.

Student Still Angered About Overloads

To The Editor:

It's me again. Ever since my letter appeared last week, people have approached me expressing concern about the overload deal. I can say truthfully that I am not speaking for myself alone when I say that the "administrative response" was weak, to say the least. If we are going to be charged a total of $810 extra to take a three semester hour (1 class) overload, the least we can expect is a better line of reasoning than what was given.

The summer of 1951 in Masefield, Arkansas, was the setting of the Mount Union Players production of "A Different Moon." The play; featuring Jean Zurbugg, Mike Exley, Jennifer Stalnker, and Leslie Jagoditz was a touching story of the troubles of the Biars family and Sara Johnson. For the Biars family and Miss Johnson, it is by getting to know one another that they see a harsh view of life. The story deals with an unwanted pregnancy. True West

Under the direction of senior drama major Shawn Douglass and Dr. Douglas Hendel, Rodman Playhouse was uplifted by the performance of Sam Shephard's Off-Broadway comedy "True West." The story line revolved around an aspiring Hollywood screenwriter Austin, portrayed by Shawn Douglass, who is visited by his drunken brother Lee, portrayed by Dr. Hendel. Both men attempt to sell their scripts to a film producer, Doug O'Keefe. In one scene Lee attacked Austin's typewriter with a golf club. The play climaxed when the men's mother came home to find her kitchen awash with paper and beer cans.

MUSIC

As our story opens, our beautiful yet somewhat less than brilliant heroine is searching for the deep dark secret of the ever-mysterious Cope zone. In the half-light of early morning, she hesitantly descends the stairs, taking note of that phenomena affectionately referred to as "Cope Time" — three minutes slow. She is shocked at the fully populated condition of the lounge; the couches are full of music majors. "Hmmm", she muses, "someone must have fed them."

It takes a few minutes, but our heroine soon musters enough courage to enter Presser and takes a seat in the back row of the deserted recital hall. As in the misty shadows of dreams, ghostlike figures appear on the stage. She soon recognizes Mr. Kandel and the Brass Choir which plays at the National Cathedral in Washington D.C. every spring. Our heroine would like for them to play on until forever, but they soon fade away, and the Concert Choir with Dr. Funk, takes the stage. They sing a Negro Spiritual, then another and another. Ah — what a marvelous choral sound! Our heroine understands why this group was welcomed in the churches, homes and schools of Ohio, New York and Pennsylvania during their Spring tour. Now the Vocal Jazz Ensemble is performing. Our heroine is happy for the singer who feels "so good", but is curious as to why they tested the microphones by saying "Hungarian, Hungarian" instead of "Czech, Czech . . . "

In the next few minutes our heroine sees the Collegium, Percussion Ensemble, Horn Choir, Woodwind Ensembles, Student and Faculty Recitals and various other activities before the setting becomes MUC Theatre and the performing group is the Wind Ensemble. This group is under the direction of Mr. Bayless and our heroine notes that they don't just perform, they bring down the house — they raise the roof! Our heroine is amazed that the theatre isn't in a constant state of disrepair. She is also amazed that these same people are the ones who marched around in the mud at football games last fall.

When the mist clears and our heroine gets her brains together, she realizes that although she has learned much about the mysterious Cope zone, the deep dark secret has not yet been revealed. Disappointed, she decides to search elsewhere. Suddenly (something in this paragraph had to happen suddenly) her musings were interrupted by voices; " . . . But I've never done an improv before! . . . can anyone tell if this thing is in tune? . . . Big Deal!! . . . That's good, but let's try it faster and louder . . . My recital is only twenty-six hours and thirty one minutes away!! . . . "

Our heroine turns to look into Presser one last time and sees the most amazing thing. Accompanied by a sound not unlike that of a single violin, there materialized on stage a shaft of silvery moonlight which vanished only after leaving with our heroine these words by Author O'Shaunessy:

We are the Music makers,
And we are the dreamers of dreams,
Wandering by lone sea-breakers,
And sitting by desolate streams;
World-losers and World-forsakers,
On whom the pale moon gleams:
Yet we are the movers and shakers
Of the world forever, it seems.

And our heroine went away from the Cope zone softly humming something by Mozart and Debussy and Bernstein.

FOOTBALL

This year the Purple Raiders decided that repetition isn't always bad. Led by first year coach Larry Kehres they once again won the OAC championship entering the NCAA Division III Playoffs.

The Raiders were pitted against the University of Dayton Flyers who were ranked No. 1 in Division III, and in the first round of Playoffs defeated them 42-36.

Before a sold-out home crowd the team was once again matched against Augustana College, and unfortunately were pushed out of the playoffs by Augustana 7-16.

The Raider Football not only dominated the OAC in games but also in having a total of fourteen selected all OAC. First team honors were given to seniors Mike Groff, Dave Kowalski, Scott Gindlesberger, Russ Kring, Mike Jarrett, Vic Harris, Dan Petcavage, Chris Weber, and junior Bill Eyer. Seniors Jeff Erskine, Greg Flasco, and junior Kevin Pilmer were chosen for second team. Receiving honorable mention were seniors Patrick Brandon and Tom Potts. Also receiving Mike Gregory Award were Gindlesberger for backs and Groff for line.

In this very successful first year leading the Purple Raiders, Coach Kehres not only guided a championship team, but was named OAC Coach of the year.

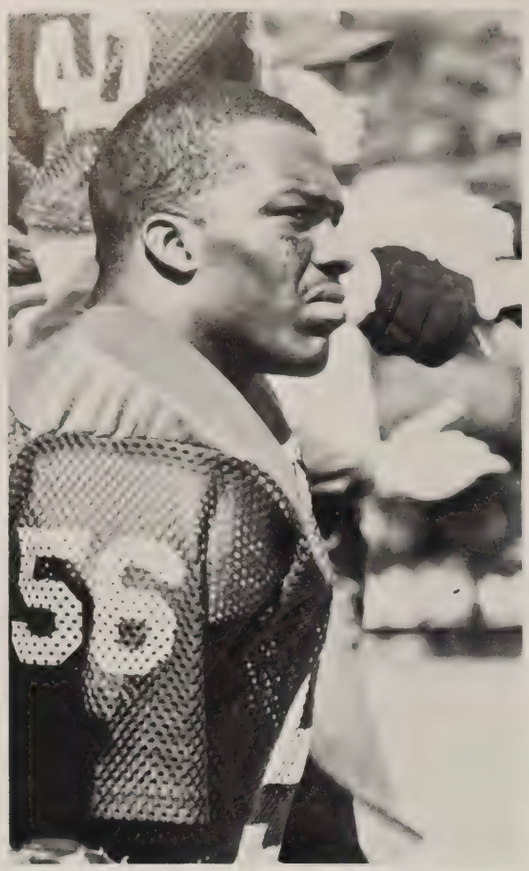
The closer you get to the end of it all, the happier you are to be rid of most of it, but sadder to lose some of it.



The long road is finally winding down. There were many ups and downs, but many friends and pleasant memories were made along the way. Good luck future 1987 OAC Football Champs! Latter . . . Patrick D. Brandon BKA "Hollywood"

FUTURE SHOCK:

TODAY IS

THE FIRST

DAY OF

THE REST

OF YOUR

LIFE.

Dennis DeYoung:

And so my friends we'll say goodnight
For time had claimed its prize
But tonight can always last
As long as we keep alive the memories of Paradise

We'll make this world for two
Our memories of yesterday
Will last a lifetime.
We'll take the best, forget the rest
And someday we'll find
These are the best of times

MAY 3, 1987

FOR TOMORROW BECOMES TODAY . . .

AND TODAY BECOMES YESTERDAY

As time ticks away from my reach
I may struggle,
Painfully,
To turn back the hands of time,
Caught in a whirlpool
Of yesterdays.
Or I may firmly grasp my diploma,
Turn to the world,
And face the change,
Realizing,
Time can change me,
But I can't change time.

Would I do this all again?
You ask.
I may want to,
But Mount's a stepping stone —
Four years of dynamic experiences,
A rollercoaster
Of tears,
Of fears,
Of laughter,
Of growth —
That I shall not look back on,
But draw upon in my future endeavors.

Writing a yearbook has been no bed of roses. I lost a lot . . . sleep, spring and Christmas breaks, money to AT&T when I needed a clinch on the outside world, perhaps points off my GPA, and sometimes my temper. Yet through it all I lived for the day this Unonian rolled off the press . . . knowing it would be worth the effort and the sight.

I can not say that I would do this all again, but it's one goal conquered, and now I must conquer my senior year.

There are many people who held me above water of whom I'd like to express my appreciation. Mike — Thanks for the confidence and good luck with next year's Unonian. John U. — Thanks for the ideas, guidance, and lunch. Mom and Dad — Thanks . . . just because. Sue and Mary and the rest of the seniors — I've loved these days; The good times have not ended . . . they're just a little farther apart.

To those who follow I wish success,

Alyson Meeker
